“This house was meant to represent Van Gogh. His art includes oil painting. His life was filled with depression and anxiety, but it didn’t stop him from painting and drawing. However inside of it is black to show how much we didn’t understand about his mentality. He did make many mistakes from his life, but his style of painting helps him get through the difficulties of his life. He began to hallucinate, and suffered attacks, which made him have suicidal thoughts. He has used his mental issues to his advantage to make his name big and to become one of the most well-known successful artists ever.”
“Wage Gap by Gender and Race:

This chart demonstrates the wage gap between males and females in the workforce. Currently on average, women are earning only about .80 cents for every dollar that a man makes. Women of color are earning even less than that. In order for this to change, women of all races must work together in order to shatter the glass and earn the same amount of money as men in the workforce.”

Before the fight against Liston, Clay taunted him by saying one of his famous quotes:

"Float like a butterfly, sting like a bee."

Clay changed his legal name after joining the Nation of Islam, a Black and Muslim civil rights group.

From this point forward, Clay is known as Muhammad Ali.

He came out victorious, took the belt, and claimed the victory.

Muhammad Ali was a person who couldn't be easily broken.

He was now known as the Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Still, he had to deal with his share of hardships and setbacks.
Ali was a political activist and was strongly against U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War. His actions showed that he was willing to stand up for what he thought was correct.

In protest of the war, he committed draft evasion when he was called to serve in the army.

This war is wrong!

But of course, actions have consequences. For refusing to fight, Ali was stripped of his boxing license in the prime of his athletic career.

In 1970, the New York State Supreme Court ordered his boxing license reinstated, and the following year the U.S. Supreme Court overturned his conviction in a unanimous decision.

Ali’s reaction to the draft was simple... "I ain’t got no quarrel with the Vietcong."

He was also arrested and sentenced to 5 years in prison. Luckily, Ali remained free while the conviction was appealed.

I ain’t got no quarrel with the Vietcong!

A...I would only fight the Vietcong in a holy war. (since Ali was a member of the Nation of Islam).
